DAYTON, Ohio, April 12, 1973, --- Dr. Ellis A. Joseph has been named as Dean of the School of Education at the University of Dayton.

The President's Advisory Council concurred with the recommendation of the Search Committee and Reverend Raymond A. Roesch, S.M., President has in turn approved the selection of Dr. Joseph.

Dr. Joseph has been serving as acting dean for one year, since the death of Dean Joseph Panzer, S.M. in April of '72.

Known for his innovative ideas in education, Dr. Joseph has initiated, developed, and directed programs within U.D. for local school systems.

Before coming to U.D. in 1961, Dr. Joseph taught at the University of Notre Dame where he served as supervisor for teaching interns while he completed his doctoral studies there.

The appointment highlights a career that has included one year of secondary school teaching, eleven years of college teaching and eight years of college administrative experience, and two visiting professorships, at Ohio U. in 1964, and at Antioch College in 1968.

Among programs and research initiated by Dr. Joseph are federally funded projects to teach English, chemistry and history to disadvantaged youth; a Master's program for educational research where students complete one-third of the program in local practicum situations; a cooperative venture with the Tipp City schools to study effects of group therapy upon achievement of emotionally disturbed students; and an opportunity for students to initiate their own programs such as student developed computer aids for teaching English.

He has also been instrumental in developing the Living Learning Center off-campus. He has served in varying capacities as an educational consultant, sponsored workshops, and conducted panels of school accrediting associations.

He was voted Professor of the Year at U.D. in 1964 and again in 1965, and he has delivered over 40 guest lectures at the invitation of colleges and professional societies.

His many publications include a book entitled Jacques Maritain on Humanism and Education, 1966 seven pamphlets of which two are entitled Readings in Integration and Civil Rights, and Readings in Cultural Differentiation, and 19 articles, the most recent of which concerns verbal patterns in educable mentally retarded and was accepted this year in the Journal of Data Education.
